Gives Two Modern Plays

The Theater Workshop recently presented two contemporary one act plays in the Fine Arts Auditorium. Junior Barbara Kesting directed Ario da Capo, and Senior Suzanne McNulty directed The Lesson.

Written by Edna St. Vincent Millay, Ario da Capo is actually two plays—a sophisticated twentieth century farce and a pastoral tragedy—within the frame of an allegorical drama. It is done in complex, symbolic poetry. The inevitability of history repeating itself is its theme. Phillis Goedert, Carol Lutz, Mary Mason, Anne Sullivan, and Mary Ann Tenfelder were included in the cast.

The Lesson, written by Eugene Ionesco, is tragi-comedy. It involves a professor who "teaches" pupils in his home, a maid who tries to dominate him, and the student who comes for the lesson which continues as history repeats itself. The play was intended merely to entertain. John Gropeter, Kevin Kirk, and Mary Beth Olynic were featured.

Hold Open House In Arcade Room

On Monday, January 15, open house was held in the new Arcade Room on the second floor of the gymnasium building. The SGA sponsored the event, and coffee and doughnuts were served.

The Arcade Room was, in past years, known as the day students' den. The Student Council Room is now located across the hall in what was formerly a storeroom. With brown, blue, white, and orange the predominant colors, the furniture and accessories in the Arcade Room are contemporary in style.

In order that the room may stay in good condition, students are asked to follow a few simple rules. Candy may be eaten, but no other food. Soda should be in paper cups, not bottles. Ash trays are to be emptied by students.

The Arcade Room will be available on appointment for club parties and other functions.

Given under the auspices of the Student Government Association, the affair this year was directed by the officers: Marilyn Costello, president; Patricia Cramer, vice president; Anne Latta, secretary; Patricia Neely, treasurer.

Speech Majors Give Reception In Arcade Room

"Projectospect," a program and reception by the speech correction department last Saturday afternoon in the newly decorated Arcade Room, was given in order to project the work and responsibilities of the profession for new and interested students.

Marilyn Costello, senior speech correction major, was chairman. Her committee was composed of Janice Breher, Mary Louise Korfmaier, Ann Luttrell, and Victoria Bayot.

Subjects discussed informally with friends and parents of present and prospective students were the routine of the speech correction clinic, the need and opportunities for speech therapists.

Help Wanted In Work Of Extension Volunteers

This year, for the first time, Fontbonne will join the summer program of the Lay Extension Volunteers. The college will affiliate with a Southern Missouri mission diocese and send student volunteers to help out in areas where there are few Catholic schools.

The students will do religious vacation work; that is, they will give instructions in catechism and prepare children for First Communion and Confirmation. Some of the volunteers will take the parish census, going from door to door to determine the number of Catholics and fallen-away Catholics in the area.

Working in groups of from three to five the students will carry on the program for six or eight weeks. During this time they will probably be housed in an apartment for their own privacy and convenience. All living costs will be paid, and their only expense will be the transportation to the mission area.

The Extension Volunteers also sponsor a one-year program for graduate students. Insurance and a monthly stipend for incidentals is arranged for this program. Something similar will be worked out for the summer volunteers.

During the second semester a series of lectures will be given for the students in the program. They will be given instructions in methods of teaching religion and given suggestions on handling situations which may arise.

Anyone interested in the program is asked to contact Sister Agnes Patrice, of the theology department and student religious affairs committee by February 9.

According to Sister Agnes Patrice, the program is aimed at those who wish to work during the summer but who do not really need money for tuition or to help at home. Certainly God will reward the volunteers for their generosity.

S. McNulty Wins College "Player of Year" Award

At the annual awards ceremony of the Fontbonne Theatre Players, during the Christmas holidays, Suzanne McNulty, senior, was declared the most valuable player and won the title "The Fontbonne Player of the Year." The best actress award was merited by Joan Wavering Grindon, A.B. '61, for playing the part of Mama in "I Remember Mama."

The ceremony followed the celebration of Holy Mass at the Greek Rite Church, the Church of the Assumption, and brunch at Old Cheshire Inn. Miss Carmelita Schmelig as moderator of the group presided; Mr. Francis Kinkel, of the English department, gave the principal address, "Censorship in the Modern Theatre."

Other awards were merited by senior Nancy Cowell as the best character actress for portraying Bloody Mary in "South Pacific," for showing the greatest promise in a first lead to junior Marlene Gruber, taking the part of the Devil in "The Green-Winged Angel."

Shirley Jahoda received the technical award for lighting and Agnes Hromadka, A.B. '61, the administrative award.

For the best actor, Peter Messineo received the honor for playing the lead Emil de Beque, for the best supporting actor, Richard Kaiser as Commander Brackett, for the best character actor, Robert Winkler as Billis, all roles in "South Pacific."

The scenic design award was given to Michael Kenney for his work in "South Pacific."

Discusses Role Of Layman In Modern Church

On December 6, 1961, the students and faculty assembled in the auditorium to hear an address by Michael de la Bedoyere. The speaker, noted English Catholic editor, author, and lecturer, was introduced by Marilyn Costello, SGA president.

Mr. Bedoyere spoke on the layman's role in the Church today. He began by pointing out the difference in the position of the Church today and that of a hundred years ago. In the nineteenth century, a period of much technical advancement, the Church seemed to be the only thing not progressing.

In the twentieth century, on the contrary, the Catholic Church has achieved a status or importance that would have been "a Utopian dream . . . a hundred years ago." As more and more men realized that happiness did not lie in scientific achievements, they began to look to Roman Catholicism for the answer.

In the early days of the Church there was a great amount of apostolic spirit among the members; but today, when the Church has achieved this high position of influence, it is almost paradoxical to talk of the lay apostolate. The work is considered "something for the minority," whereas the attitude should prevail that "to be a Catholic is to be an apostle."

There are three movements in the Church today which are important factors in the desired apostolic spirit. These are (1) the liturgical movement, (2) a campaign to increase the understanding between Catholics and other Christians, and (3) the Ecumenical Council.

The lay apostolate is just "common sense;" for if one really believes in something, he should naturally want "to communicate it to others."

Suzanne McNulty, the Player of the Year.

Mary Jane Krekeler Is First Alumna Enrolled in PAVLA

Which Fontbonne student will be the next to volunteer for PAVLA, Papal Volunteers for Latin America? Who are the students who will teach catechism, aid in developing Catholic Leaders, and spread Christian principles throughout Latin America?

Mary Jane Krekeler A.B., '62, is the first Fontbonne alumna to answer the call from the Vatican. She will work in La Paz, Bolivia, teaching English in a Catholic school. This three-year assignment came after a series of aptitude, intelligence, and psychological tests. At present she is studying at the Center of Intercultural Formation in Cuernavaca, Morelos, Mexico.

Mary Jane, as one of the lay apostles in a neighbor country to the south, is helping to satisfy a crying need in the Church today. The importance of the laity's role in the Church is being stressed more and more. This is very true in Latin America where lay leaders are desperately needed to strengthen the Church.

To answer the pleas of the Bishops of Latin America for lay help, in the summer of 1960 Rome issued a special document which called for volunteers from among the ranks of the laymen to help "the priestless millions in many parts of Latin America." Thus PAVLA began and was incorporated into the Papal Program

Even Alumnae Are Missing

Have you ever won a sweepstakes? Of course, the Irish Sweepstakes would be nice, but just for practice take a chance on the sweepstakes Alice Cafferata Whelan, chairman of the alumnae membership committee, is holding. In an attempt to locate some of the "lost sheep" she has given a list of alumnae for whom she is searching. For each clue that you can furnish, she offers one chance on a $10.00 gift certificate at Stix, Baer, and Fuller.

If you can supply any information concerning the whereabouts of the alumnae listed, their names are listed in the FONT office.
